WORKSHOP ON ADULTERATION IN FOOD ITEMS

The Department of Microbiology conducted a workshop on "Adulteration in Food Items" on September 10, 2019, to educate the students on common food adulterants.

Objectives: The primary objective of the workshop was to make students aware of common food adulterants and various techniques to detect them.

The resource person started the session by discussing the various types of adulterants that can be found in food items, such as paraffin wax, castor oil, and hydrocarbons in fats, oils, and butter, and the mixing of brick powder in red chilli powder and pepper with dried papaya seeds.

Various techniques to detect the presence of water in milk, detergent in milk, and starch in milk were demonstrated to the students. Students were also shown how to detect potatoes in ghee and sugar in honey. The speaker encouraged students to be more vigilant when buying food items.

Outcome: Students were able to learn about various techniques to detect common food adulterants and were encouraged to be more cautious when buying food items.
